

JLM Wines — Content Production Guide

How a blog post moves from idea to live, who does each step, and where you do it. Source of truth: jlmops docs/WORKFLOWS.md §13. This PDF is a snapshot — regenerate it if the workflow changes.

Where you work

- Manager: the Dashboard task queue is your workbench. Everything you do happens there.
 - Admin: the Tasks view is your workbench. The Library is for browsing content (the catalog), seeing what's due (the Deficiency view), and opening a piece's documents and history (the entity drawer).

The blog chain — who does what

When a blog post is started, the system creates an English + Hebrew pair and all the steps below at once. Each step is a task that lands with the right person:

1. Create WP Stubs — Admin
2. Draft (English) — Admin / Claude writes the first draft
3. Admin Review — Admin checks the draft
4. Edit (English) — Manager ← your job
5. Translate (Hebrew) — Admin / Claude creates the Hebrew
6. Translate Edit (Hebrew) — Manager ← your job
7. Images — Admin
8. Publish — Admin puts it live (both languages)

You (manager) own the two editing passes — the English Edit and the Hebrew Translation Edit. Everything else is Admin.

How to turn around an Edit (English)

1. Open the app → you land on the Dashboard.
 2. In the task list, find “Edit: [title]” → tap the row to open it.
 3. You’ll see Open Doc, a Notes box, and Lock + Version.
 4. Tap Open Doc → edit the post in Google Docs.
 5. Back in the app, tap Lock + Version.
 6. It asks: does the Hebrew version need editing too?
 - No, just lock — finishes your task.
 - Yes, spawn realign — finishes your task and creates a Hebrew follow-up task.
 7. Done. The piece is versioned and your task closes.

How to turn around a Translation Edit (Hebrew)

Same as the English Edit, with one extra:

- You also get an Open EN source link, so you can read the locked English next to the Hebrew while you work.
 - The “does the other version need editing?” question is about the English side this time.

Good to know

- There is no “In Progress” button on content tasks — a task is simply open until you Lock + Version it.
- Can’t do a task? Tap Revert to send it back to Admin.
- Publishing and going live are always Admin steps.
- State only changes by finishing the task that owns it — nobody sets status by hand.
